DECLARATION OF DR. KIMBERLY MEHLMAN-OROZCO

I, DR. KIMBERLY MEHLMAN-OROZCO, do hereby state and declare:

I am over the age of 18 and the facts contained in the following Declaration are known to me of my own personal knowledge and if called upon to testify, I could and would completely do so.

Summary of Credentials

1. I received my B.S. from George Mason University cum laude in Administration of Justice, my M.A. from George Mason University in Justice, Law, and Crime Policy, and my Ph.D. in Criminology, Law and Society from George Mason University.
2. I currently serve as the Executive Director of an anti-trafficking non-profit organization—Freedom Light. In this capacity, I provide training and technical assistance to businesses on how to combat human trafficking.
3. I also am the Founder and CEO of Break the Chain LLC, where I actively serve as a human trafficking expert witness in criminal and civil cases across the United States (see Appendix A for a list of cases incorporated into my Curriculum Vitae).
4. I have authored a book on human trafficking, Hidden in Plain Sight: America's Slaves of the New Millennium, which received overwhelming praise from anti-trafficking experts and is used to train law enforcement. I have personally trained law enforcement on how to identify human trafficking, including:
  - Royal Canadian Mounted Police in Nova Scotia, Canada
  - Homeland Security Investigations in Buffalo, New York
  - Homeland Security Investigations in Raleigh, North Carolina
  - North Carolina State Bureau of Investigations in Raleigh, North Carolina
  - Montebello Police Department in Montebello, California
5. I previously served as an adjunct human trafficking subject matter expert for RAND Corporation, a nonprofit institution that helps improve policy and decision-making through research and analysis. In that capacity, I worked on three study proposals:
  - (i) Research design to evaluate the National Human Trafficking Hotline;
  - (ii) Development of an evidence based human trafficking risk assessment tool for organizations working with minors; and
  - (iii) Evaluating the outcomes of housing services for adult and juvenile human trafficking survivors.
6. A more detailed summary of my credentials is available in my Curriculum Vitae, which is attached hereto as Appendix A.

Materials Reviewed

In addition to the materials cited herein:

1. I have reviewed H.B. 1811, specifically Section 129B.004 “Sexual Materials Health Warnings;”
2. I have reviewed the Declaration of Dr. Vanessa Bouché; and
3. I have reviewed the sources apparently referenced<sup>1</sup> by Dr. Vanessa Bouché.

Rebuttal Opinions

Rebuttal Opinion 1: Dr. Bouché references no reliable, empirical data to conclude that the three sexual material health warnings are truthful, non-misleading, and consistent with the published academic and scientific literature examining the effects of pornography on children and adolescents.

While Dr. Bouché seems to reference the abstracts of several uncited sources, these quotes do not reflect the full content of the studies and exclude contradictory conclusions and limitations to the studies’ findings, which bely Dr. Bouché’s conclusions. Moreover, Dr. Bouché does not address countervailing empirical research. Finally, Dr. Bouché does not grapple with issues related to reliability and/or generalizability of her referenced materials, as well as the limitations of the findings of her own sources.

Rebuttal Opinion 2: Dr. Bouché references no reliable, empirical data to conclude that pornography is potentially biologically addictive, is proven to harm human brain development, desensitizes brain reward circuits, increases conditioned responses, and weakens brain function.

For example, Dr. Bouché refers to one article in attempt to claim that “scientific studies have indeed shown that internet pornography addiction fits into the addiction framework and shares similar basic mechanisms with substance addiction.” In the abstract of this study that she chose to reference, the authors liken Internet pornography addiction to substance addiction, as well as “Internet addiction and Internet Gaming Disorder.” However, the authors even recognize that “future research needs to address whether or not there are specific differences between substance and behavior addiction.” To be clear, the authors of the study Dr. Bouché chose to reference compare addiction involving “psychoactive substances such as alcohol, opioids and cocaine” to pathological behaviors such as “uncontrolled gambling, internet use, gaming, pornography, and sexual acting out.” Ultimately, Dr. Bouché fails to acknowledge the limitations of this research.

Additionally, in an attempt to support her opinion related to this topic, Dr. Bouché references the results of an article which state, “Overlapping features exist between CSB and substance use disorders. Common neurotransmitter systems may contribute to CSB and substance use disorders, and recent neuroimaging studies highlight similarities relating to craving and attentional biases.” However, Dr. Bouché fails to acknowledge the conclusions of the authors from the same article, which clearly state, “Despite the growing body of research linking compulsive sexual behavior (CSB) to substance addictions, significant gaps in understanding continue to complicate classification of CSB as an addiction.”

Last, in an attempt to support her opinion related to this topic, Dr. Bouché references an abstract of another article<sup>2</sup>, which claims that “an increased use of Internet pornography decreased boys’ academic performance six months later.” However, in the abstract of the article, the authors recognize that this relationship may be spurious and explained by confounding variables such as self-discipline, engagement in sexual activities other than pornography, and total media exposure. Notably, the data for this article was collected in another country—Belgium.

Ultimately, despite the fact that Dr. Bouché’s own selected references suggest that there are “significant gaps in understanding” which “complicate” the classification of compulsive sexual behavior as an addiction, Dr. Bouché concludes that CSB is an addiction that “may be” amplified by Internet pornography. This conclusion isn’t adequately supported by her own references for her declaration.

Moreover, the use of the word “proven” in this sexual material health warning is counter to scientific principles. Regardless of academic discipline or field, the same principals are used to demarcate science from non-science/pseudoscience, and in order for theory to be considered scientific, it must be able to be tested and conceivably falsified<sup>3</sup>. As such, it is counter to state-of-the-science research methods to use the word “proven” in a social scientific context, considering that social scientific research cannot be used to “prove” a particular theory or relationship, but rather establish evidence on the statistically likelihood of its existence.

Rebuttal Opinion 3: Dr. Bouché references no reliable, empirical data to conclude that pornography is associated with low self-esteem and body image, eating disorders, impaired brain development, and other emotional and mental illnesses.

The article<sup>4</sup> Dr. Bouché chose to reference in her declaration in relation to this issue clearly states that, “as most of the studies (24/26) included in this review were cross-sectional in nature, causal relationships between pornography exposure and body image cannot be assumed...findings cannot be generalized to adolescents...other limitations include a potential bias in overall sampling...self-selection bias may thus also limit the generalizability of findings.”

Dr. Bouché references the abstract of another study to claim that there is a “negative association between reported pornography hours per week and gray matter volume in the right caudate area of the brain<sup>5</sup>.” The study acknowledges that these findings are limited, especially by the small sample size<sup>6</sup>. Moreover, subsequent research further questions the reliability of these findings, citing, “Although recent neuroimaging studies have suggested some possible neurobiological mechanisms of CSB, these results should be treated as tentative given methodological limitations (e.g., small sample sizes, cross-sectional designs, solely male subjects, and so on). Current gaps in research exist complicating definitive determination whether CSB is best considered as an addiction or not.”<sup>7</sup>

Despite the repeated discussion of limitations across the literature and the clear statement that a causal relationship between pornography and low self-esteem and body image issues cannot be assumed in her own references, Dr. Bouché’s declaration suggests that this association is “established.”

Rebuttal Opinion 4: Dr. Bouché references no reliable, empirical data to conclude that pornography increases the demand for prostitution, child exploitation, and child pornography.

Based on my research, education, and experience, I am not aware of any reliable academic or scientific literature which definitively concludes that pornography increases the demand for prostitution. While Dr. Bouché does claim that one study “concluded” that men who were arrested for solicitation of prostitution were twice as likely to report having watched pornographic movies over the preceding year than the national sample, this purported “conclusion” cannot be used to establish causal inference and in no way reliably assesses demand for pornography.

Although it is unclear which study Dr. Bouché is referring to, given the absence of citations throughout her declaration, it is possible that she was referring to a 2005 comparison of male customers of female street prostitutes with national samples of men<sup>8</sup>. If this is the article Dr. Bouché was referencing, it fails to make any causal inference between pornography and prostitution.

Moreover, in her past publications, Dr. Bouché claims that “a growing body of research implicates pornography for driving the demand for prostituted women.”<sup>9</sup> Dr. Bouché does not cite to any peer-reviewed research or book to support this statement, and rather, cites to a reading list from a now apparently defunct non-profit known as “Captive Daughters<sup>10</sup>.” Not only is Captive Daughters not a reliable or empirically based organization, but the group makes erroneous and entirely unfounded claims that:

- All women who engage in pornography are prostitutes;
- All pornographers are pimps;
- All prostitution is trafficking;
- Prostitution is paid serial rape;
- Prostitution is a form of violence against women; and
- The distinctions between trafficking, prostitution, and child prostitution are “false<sup>11</sup>.”

Not only are the claims by Dr. Bouché’s cited source antithetical to all rigorous empirical research within the field, but they are also counter to recommendations by leading human rights organizations, such as Amnesty International, which have published policy and research on the need for decriminalization and protection of sex workers’ rights<sup>12</sup>.

Ultimately, to support this topic, Dr. Bouché references an abstract of an article, which claims “individuals with a younger “age of onset” for adult pornography use were more likely to engage in deviant pornography (bestiality or child) compared to those with a later “age of onset”<sup>13</sup>.” However, the findings in no way support the thesis of her opinion or the sexual material health warnings. Moreover, the findings were significantly limited and not appropriate for generalizability. The sample was overwhelmingly women and, of the sample, 76.1% (92) of men watched no pornography or adult-only pornography and 93.4% (458) of women watched no pornography or adult-only pornography. While 16 men and 16 women admitted to watching child pornography in this study, the findings fail to draw any link between adult-pornography use and deviant sexuality.

Conclusion

Based on my education, research, experience, and the materials reviewed, I declare under penalty of perjury:

There are no reliable data causally linking pornography to an increased demand for prostitution and therefore it is not accurate to conclude that pornography leads to an increased demand for prostitution. There are no reliable data causally linking pornography to an increased demand for child exploitation and therefore it is not accurate to conclude that pornography leads to an increased demand for child exploitation. There are no reliable data causally linking pornography to an increased demand for child pornography and therefore it is not accurate to conclude that pornography leads to an increased demand for child pornography. Ultimately, Dr. Bouché's opinions are not based on or supported by state-of-the-science research or reliable data.

DECLARATION UNDER PENALTY OF PERJURY

Pursuant to 28 U.S.C §1746, I declare under penalty of perjury that the above statements are true and based upon my personal knowledge.
